THE ORIGINAL

ELEVEN JOKES

Miss Agnes Repplier, lecturing on "The Mission of Humor" at the Colony Club, New York, said she had been informed that there were twenty-two original jokes. Any man or woman who produces eleven original jokes in a lecture is a world wonder. With all due respect to Miss Repplier we are inclined to think that Mr. Choate was too amiable and too receptive.

What are these eleven original, fundamental, basic jokes, not made for a parish or an occasion, necessarily human and universal? Look over the comic weeklies from the beginning of Punch and you will find the same lines of humorous thought, endless repetition of a fool born jest, ponderous elaborations of a trifle, changes of an old idea to suit the time and place. The old jest books—Joe Miller's, and before his, Poggi's and Bacon—show how our predecessors anticipated us. Plutarch's "Morals" is full of jests and jocose anecdotes that are now fondly thought contemporaneous. Turn to his "Apothegms or Remarkable Sayings of Kings and Great Commanders," and you find this quip: A prating barber asked Archelaus how he would be trimmed. Archelaus answered: "In silence." Read "The Banquet of the Seven Wise Men," Englished by Roger Davis, A. M., and there a sage is thus reported: "In this mistake, however, I'm much of the youth's mind, who, throwing a stone at a dog, hit his stepmother, adding: 'My throw is not lost, however.' But what do you not find in Plutarch? The Rev. B. S. Lombard of London, who stated recently that garrulity is the cause of many nervous diseases and the increasing amount of insanity, might well consult Plutarch on talkativeness. "The tautologizing babbler," says Plutarch, "is everywhere drunk—in the market place, at the theater, in the public porticos or deambulatories, as well by night as by day."

The favorite jokes in this country have been for years based on the mother-in-law, the farmer and the summer boarder, the city boarding house, spring cleaning (and the stovepipe played an important part), the greedy goat. The mother-in-law was naturally the victim of the first jocose son-in-law, while there could be no joke about the stovepipe before the existence of the pipe. There is the cannibal missionary joke that has done yeoman's service, but it cannot be older than the appearance of the first missionary. What are the primeval eleven jokes? One of the oldest known to us begins: "Old Noah, he had three sons, Shem, Ham and Japheth," but there must have been jokes before the flood. What were the eleven that were preserved in the ark? No doubt the gag about the elephant bringing his trunk was coined by some irreverent looker-on, who saw in the embarkation only food for mirth. Death by drowning was too good for him. But what jokes did Noah and his sons take with them for daily recreation? We can be sure of only one—the mother-in-law jest. Will not Miss Repplier tell to the world the other ten?—Boston Herald.

Let plumbers beware! Nemesis may be close upon them, if a Chicago court says the word. A plumber of that city has been sued for $1,000 damages by a woman because her rosy cheeks turned sallow and staid so for a month after he had done a job of plumbing in her house. The job was badly done, she says, and the pipes let poisonous gases into the house, which caused the spoiling of her complexion. Should she win her case, every woman who had lost the roses from her cheeks might feel inclined to take a whack at her plumber.—Ex.
